Rose Arbor Farm is a small family farm in Oregon's beautiful Willamette Valley. We have recently transitioned from raising registered Shetland Sheep to Suri alpacas. When a friend suggested we look at alpacas we were amazed at what we found. Raising alpacas is a lifestyle that is profitable on many levels. There are tax advantages of running a livestock business, income from the sale of breeding stock, fiber and finished products.

Alpacas are gentle animals that are easy to handle and care for. They are naturally friendly and curious and always want to be our "helpers" whenever we are in the pasture or barn.

Alpaca babies are called cria and our first one was born this spring. He is a gorgeous boy with lots of luster in his fleece. His sire is a champion and we are excited to see how "Captain's Majestic Theo" does in the show ring next year.

If you are looking for a rewarding lifestyle in the nation's fastest growing segment of the livestock industry, take a look at alpacas. We are members of AOBA – the Alpaca Owners and Breeders Association and its local affiliate Columbia Alpaca Breeders Association (CABA). We are also members of the Suri Network and our animals are registered in the Alpaca Registry, Inc. (ARI). These groups provide valuable information and support on many levels.

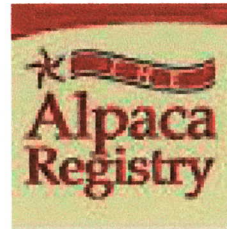

We are excited about alpacas and would love to share our enthusiasm with you. Call or email us at lawrences@monitorcoop.com to arrange a farm visit. Come smell the roses and walk through the arbor to the joy of the alpaca lifestyle!
